INFORMATION

It's August 1964 and Conway Twitty and his band, the Lonely Blue Boys, are playing a gig at the Castaway, a club/bar at Geneva-on-the-Lake, Ohio, the lake being Lake Erie.

During the preceding seven years, Conway had been a rock 'n' roll star, placing 14 songs on the Top 100 charts, with It's Only Make Believe making #1 in late 1958. By 1964 he was already looking to a career in country music either as a writer or performer. He had been recording country demos for several years and within a year of this Ohio engagement, he would record with Owen Bradley at DECCA RECORDS and set up a winning streak of chart entries that lasted for the next quarter of a century, right up until his early death at the age of 59 in 1993.

So, in 1964, he is still playing his rock 'n' roll catalogue but peppering his performance with a few country classics and recent hits. The engagement at the Castaway was recorded and the tapes lay around for many years until several albums of the material were issued in the late 70s. The albums released in the States back then had poor sound and dire sleeve artwork; they were badly edited and not an edifying experience for the listener.

Twitty fans will revel in hearing these 'live' recordings in the best sound quality ever presented of this material. Listen as Conway and his band get the joint rockin' and jumpin' with an energetic set that moves along from start to finish. Several songs are included that Conway never ever recorded either before or after the engagement.

The booklet included in the digipac features the Castaway story together with newspaper articles, posters and illustrations.
